MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A RAILROAD TRAIN AT SEA. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from on board the care of the Ohio and Missouri railroad, west of Vincennes, May 2d gives a description of a somewhat novel kind of railroading. He says:

"On crossing the bridge of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, at Vincennes, the traveller westward witnesses a novel sight in railroading. Before him is a lake (the Wabash valley overflowed) over six miles wide and longer than the eye can reach. Across this sea the train runs on a trestle work, that sticks out just four inches above the top of the water. Nothing is seen on its broad sur-Mantillas, Marseilles for Basques, White Fringes, Sheetings, &c., &c.

All over the lake inches, parallel with King street; thence South are whirling eddies, carrying big trees and drift round and round. These soon make your head swim, and you feel that the trestle work is certainly moving; the bottom seems to be undermined and is moving; while the top is tipling over against the current, and you expect every moment to hear the splash of the train going down into the sea. But it don't go, and there is no danger, frightful as

"But now we come to a place that really seems fearful. We are in the middle of the lake. It is just twilight. Almost out of sight of land-nothing but a waste of water on every side of that long, solitary railway train; we leave the straight line, and go curving southward like a snake's track. Why? and left it in a zigzag line, (and half upset, at that,) some distance below where it originally stood. "On this half-overturned, racked, and tottlish-looking trestle work our train crept cautiou-ly along. A railroad train out at sea, with iron enough about it to anchor it safely at the bottom, and creeping along on a shaky trestle work, that the engineer is afraid to jar for fear he may jar it down!"
